Osac guatemala 2018 crime safety report

BALTIMORE (WJZ) - The official Twitter account of the White House shared a compelling statistical Thursday between President Donald Trump's Twitter feud with the King. Elijah Cummings: Baltimore is higher than Honduras, El Salvador, or Guatemala—the three Central American nations leading our border overvoltage. LIVE: Gov. Larry Hogan will update COVID A 4 p.m on Wednesday the Democrats have run Baltimore for 5 decades. It's time for responsibility. Today's news: pic.twitter.com/tDg50 Ex Wm — The White House @(WhiteHouse) 1 August 2019 The president repeated the complaint while talking to journalists shortly after the tweet was published. WJZ decided to check the president's statistics; That's what we found. THE CLAIM: The White House tweet links to her West Wing Reads blog. The complaint in question comes from the Washington Examiner, which reportedly obtained its data from active principles of right-wing Princeton Policy Advisors. The article Examiner has listed the Baltimore murder rate to 56 for 100,000 residents compared to 50 El Salvador, 22 Guatemala and Honduras' 38. THE CHECK:READ MORE: Maryland Board Of Education wants schools to offer full in-person learning for the school 2021-22 Year WJZ has examined the data from 2018, the last full year for which the data is available. The data of the U.S. Department of State Foreign Security Advisory Council lists Elmurder rate at 50 per 100,000. The murder rate of Honduras 2018 was not included in the annual report on the crime and security of the OSAC published in April, but a report by the National Autonomous University of Honduras gave a figure of 41.4 murders for 100,000 residents. How does BALTIMORE COMPARE work? Charm City ended 2018 with a total of 309 murders, according to the Baltimore Police Department. So far, in 2019, 196 murders took place. Using the estimate of the July 2018 population of the US Census Bureau for the city of 602.495, Baltimore's 2018 murder rate is 51.3 murders for 100,000 residents. WHY, WHEN, WH that terrifies the country. Two street bands, the Mara Salvatrucha, or MS-13 for a short time, and Barrio 18 represent 95% of all band members in Guatemala, with a total of 53 other known bands working only in Guatemala City (Guatemala Human Rights Commission). In 2012 it was reported that there were 17,000members and 5,000 members MS-13 (Council for Foreign Relations, 2018), with probably higher numbers today. Both bands were originally formed in Los Angeles, the United States, and now have almost complete control over Guatemala, which lasted 36 years in 1960-1996, left the incredibly weak state and the country became accustomed to high levels of violence, which remained after the war. During this civil war, funding was removed from public education and other services and transferred to military spending, making schools sub-financed and inaccessible to Guatemalan youth. The combination of the lack of post-war recovery with high levels of poverty fuels the participation of bands, with the boys joining young people of 12 years (US Bureau of Diplomatic Security, 2018). Since these bands have mostly been composed for 15-24 years, public opinion towards young people in general is negative, leaving them socially disembarked; here is where we see bands opening their arms and showing them acceptance and promising a better and more powerful life. By providing these young people, inexperienced individuals with lethal weapons, they become happy and eager to impress their "boss". Most of the violence is targeted towards rival gangs on the wars of turf, as each band tries to spread their influence and also traffic of routes throughout the country. These bands can also participate in robbery, drug trafficking, and human trafficking (GHRC). In 2016, it was reported that there were 26-50 murders for 100,000 individuals (CFR, 2018), mostly caused by gang violence. In terms of control, a very minimal action is being taken to subdue these bands and the violence that accompanies them. These high-profile bands have a stronghold for businesses, communities, transport systems and law enforcement, due to extortion. Those who do not pay extortionists also face extreme violence and death. The application of the law is incredibly corrupt, accepting bribes from gangs, allowing them to rule over cities and communities. There is very little confidence in the police force because of violations of human rights during the civil war. When the action is taken, only about 3% of the crimes are persecuted (CNN). Prisons are overcrowded and governed by gangs, recruiting new members from within. In 2007, the United Nations created the International Commission against Impunity in Guatemala to help investigate and pursue criminal groups that may have infiltrated state institutions, which the bands did (CFR, 2018). The country has seen other reforms, but few are successful and can actually cause an increase in band participation. In the last ten years, a slight drop in the murders occurred, especially since 2008 where more than 40 murders for 100,000 people occurred. Although this seems an important change, the violence of the bands is still a problem that is pushing many families to seek refuge in the United States. Unfortunately, the current US policies prevent these people from asking for asylum, and President Trump asks Central American countries to prevent these caravans from continuing their long journey.
